

What's your flavour?

PERSONAL style is, er, a personal thing. So, do you know what your "fashion stamp" is? International stylist and corporate image consultant Amanda Curren, of Ask Amanda, believes women's style is divided into five types - classic, feminine, creative, dramatic and natural. (She also teaches a stylist course at Marlestone TAFE.) Check out the Scene readers below and their style preference. Which gal is most similar to you? Visit www.askamanda.com.au

CLASSIC

Timeless, tailored style – quality is valued over quantity, style more than fashion.

Julie Wrobel, 29, runs her own boutique marketing firm, Algo Mas Marketing, (Aries).

Her outfit: Wrap dress from Sydney store Ojay, Prada heels, late grandmother Dorothy's black patent bag, Blue Chilli accessories.

Wardrobe musts: Tailored shirts, neutral pants, wrap dresses, simple jewellery, pointy heels.

First time "outed" as a classic dresser: Inspired by film icons such as Grace Kelly.

Celeb follower: Mischa Barton.

CREATIVE

Individual stylist – refuses a packaged look.

Erin Browne, 27, fashion design student/retail assistant/door girl (Libra).

Her outfit: Vintage and self-designed – including vintage nightie turned into a top and hand-made waist belt and teeny shorts. The theme is "pirate".

Wardrobe musts: Jeans, belts, T-shirts, over-the-top sunnies – and a big bag.

First time "outed" as a creative dresser: Dressing as punks with sister Niamh, using their mother's '80s clothes.

Celeb follower: Bai Ling.

FEMININE

Loves flowing, feminine skirts and dresses, and pretty blouses:

Zara Capon, 21, is a model/administration officer (Pisces).

Her outfit: Bardot frock, Supre wrap belt, Pierre Fontaine heels, Melbourne accessories.

Wardrobe musts: Skinny-leg jeans, bright tees, versatile belts – and anything pink and sparkly.

First time "outed" as a feminine dresser: Once she finished school Zara started buying frocks and anything "girly, bright and fun".

Celeb follower: Reese Witherspoon.

DRAMATIC

Bold, sophisticated – walks into a room and knocks 'em dead with poise and individuality.

Georgia Simos, 19, commerce/media student and fashion enthusiast (Aquarius).

Her outfit: Zimmermann patchwork top, Witchery shorts, Mollini pointy heels and accessories from Diva and Acoustic Stomach.

Wardrobe musts: Jeans, dressy tops, lots of accessories, nice heels and flat shoes.

First time "outed" as a dramatic dresser: Photos of her in mum's heels, hats and jewellery.

Celeb follower: Liz Hurley.

NATURAL WOMAN

KATE Patrick would be the last person to book herself an appointment with a stylist. Running around after her one-year-old daughter, Adie, keeps her too preoccupied to worry about her wardrobe contents. Kate, 30, is a "natural" dresser – someone who has "a relaxed style that allows for ease of movement". Scene doxed her in for a style workshop with fashion forecaster Sue Dixon, who runs Your Style.

In no time, she had Kate change tops, whack on heels and straighten her posture. "I've got a more 'together' style now," Kate says.

To book in for a workshop, visit the website, www.your-style.com.au

Meagan Franzmann, left, and Sue Dixon, right, help Kate Patrick.

